Madison looking to 'calm' traffic in city

BY MARK CAMPBELL

The City of Madison will be looking for ways to "calm traffic" based on discussions held by Mayor Bob Courtney, Police Chief John Wallace and members of the city's Traffic Committee on Tuesday night.

While considering both old and news business, the Committee repeatedly dealt with issues related to vehicles traveling at excessive speed — especially in the city's neighborhoods along East Second Street and on Green Road between the Rucker Sports Complex and Clifty Falls State Park — as residents requested everything from additional speed bumps, to removal of existing speed bumps and placement of stop signs, to more traffic enforcement.

Courtney noted that excessive speed is a problem throughout the city and that Madison was not alone in that problem. He said addressing the problem could take a combination of the suggestions offered by residents but he also asked the Traffic Committee and residents to be open to other, more creative options as well.

"We need to determine how can we calm things down. It may not be more signs or stop lights," Courtney said. "Speeding is an issue throughout the community. I'm asking if you members of the Traffic Committee would be willing to experiment with other creative options to see what works better."

Courtney listed "speed cushions, speed markings and temporary stop signs" as options for "calming traffic" and that now is a perfect time to consider all options because Madison is embarking on a couple of projects that will impact the city's traffic flow considerably in the future.

Crystal Beach Swimming Pool attendance strong since opening

BY COLLIN OVERTON

With so many local events canceled and the pool at Clifty Falls still closed due to the coronavirus pandemic, Crystal Beach Swimming Pool has seen a higher-than-normal turnout over first two weeks being open.

The downtown pool opened on June 15, about a month behind its usual schedule, with new procedures, schedules and programs in place for Phase 4 of Indiana's Back on Track reopening, including two separate swim sessions, sanitation periods in between and a 250-person limit on capacity. With so many pools in the region still under lockdown and swimmers itching to get out, the pool is drawing visitors both from Jefferson County and other counties, head manager Debbie Snodgrass said.

"The kids have been cooped up so long, this is a great place, I think, for them to be able to get out and have some normalcy again. We do have a lot of people that are coming from out of town visiting — we get calls every day. I think that's probably helped our attendance, too. From my understanding there's not a lot of pools open, so they're willing to drive a little bit," Snodgrass said.

Crystal Beach manager Debbie Snodgrass sprays a bench down with sanitizing solution during the 15-minute break at 1 p.m. on Wednesday. Lifeguards and managers sanitize the park multiple times daily to protect visitors during the COVID-19 pandemic. With other area public pools remaining closed, the park has already reached capacity a few times since opening.

While an afternoon by the pool might have visitors feeling like it's just another summer day, a lot of things have had to be tweaked to allow the pool to open. One-time entry is no longer offered; instead, Crystal Beach has set aside three separate sessions in a new schedule: senior swim and water aerobics from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m., regular swim sessions from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., a half-hour sanitation period from 3 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. during which visitors have to leave, and another regular session from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Most Kentucky primary election results are still pending review

BY COLLIN OVERTON

More than 2,000 voted in Trimble County on Wednesday in what has been called the highest turnout for a primary in Kentucky's election history.

Due to the high number of absentee ballots and early voting — which alone broke state turnout records — the final totals won't be fully known until Tuesday, June 30, Trimble County Clerk Tina Browning said. Wednesday's counts were recorded at the Milton and Bedford Elementary School polling places and posted on the front door windows around 6:30 p.m. The following totals reflect the sum of those counts.

No local candidates were listed on Trimble's primary ballot this year, but county residents voted for Felicia Rabourn over Robert "Bobby" Foree in the Republican race for 47th District State Representative 169 to 96.

Amy McGrath edged potential upset candidate, Charles Booker, 109 to 68 votes in the Democratic primary for Kentucky's U.S. Senate seat in Trimble County, a race that remains tight statewide, with precincts so far reporting and McGrath ahead 28,147 to 24,076 Thursday, according to the Associated Press.

The winner will take on Republican incumbent Mitch McConnell, who garnered 228 votes in Trimble County on Wednesday and 87.4% of Republican votes statewide over a field of seven other candidates.

The Republican race for Fourth District U.S. Representative was just as lopsided with incumbent Thomas Massie winning 90% of votes among Trimble residents and 88% among all Kentuckians. He bested challenger Todd McMurtry, who ran a bitter campaign against Massie in the wake of police brutality protests in the month of June.

The Democratic primary for the Fourth District was more competitive with Alexandra Owensby out-polling Shannon Fabert 155 to 103 votes in Trimble County and carrying 59.7% of votes statewide.

President Donald Trump faced no challengers in his reelection bid. However, seven voters in Trimble County chose "uncommitted," according to election totals. Joe Biden won the most votes for the Democratic Presidential Primary with 99 but nearly as many voters opted to not vote for any candidate (92).

The remaining totals will be posted on the windows of the county courthouse in the coming days.

Crafton recalls a rich life of music and friendships

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

There is a cadre of highly skilled and versatile musicians in the Madison area who can be called on to play with just about any band doing any style of music. They are just that good. They don't need much rehearsal, just tell them the song.

On guitar, Joe Perkinson, Tom Steveley, Bill Lancton, Darryl Hewitt and Jimmy Davis come to mind. On bass you can call Danny Cook or Tim Halcomb. Kerry Mefford or Chris Watson can play any style of drums. On trumpet you can always rely on Brooke Reindollar and Dave Butler. And on keyboards, the man is Woody Woodmansee.

But as I interviewed many of these great musicians, one other name kept coming up. They'd ask me, "Have you talked to Deano Crafton yet? What about Deano, you should do a story on him!" Message received.

"When I was about 10 years old my cousin Jimmy and I would go visit our grandparents. They lived in Trimble County on Corn Creek," says Deano. "They hosted this big Saturday night jam session and there were so many talented musicians there. Players like Tilford Mckay, Woody Penick, Elmer 'Bud' Law, Woody Temple, Bobby Newby and my uncles, Payne Crafton and Bill Briddle.

"I'll never forget one of the older guys told me, 'Even if you don't know the song, just jump in and hang on!' You could say I've been hanging on and learning ever since.

"My full-time professional music career lasted about five years, from 1976 until '81 or so. No day job, just

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stop making trouble where there is none

To the editor:

Dear editor and my community, as you've read, the name, mascot and school colors of my school Southwestern of Jefferson County is under attack. The letters printed from others about the subject have not been accurate and have had some false information. There are lots of things I let go. Many things I turn my head to. I'm offended on a daily basis by abortion, child pornography, doctors who still go straight to a prescription of narcotics without trying non-narcotics first, human trafficking. I could go on and on. We all get offended. I try to use my best judgment. I ask myself if what I'm fighting for or against directly impacts me, and then I go to the Word and to my Father for answers and guidance.

One thing that I despise is lies, mistruths, and people stating things out of context. I'm a 1978 graduate of Southwestern. Both my children are graduates of Southwestern. I currently have two grandchildren who are students and athletes at Southwestern. I'm in attendance at most school functions. Never once. Never, ever, have I heard or seen anyone say or do ANYTHING racial. I can assure you, it is not even in the mindset of students, athletes, parents, or fans. I purchased several T-shirts in 2019 for volleyball and basketball games and not one of them has a Confederate flag on it. We did away with the flag and our mascot a few years ago. We kept the name Rebels. I'm offended by the attack on the history behind how the name was selected when Saluda and Hanover schools were joined all those years ago. The people behind this attack will never be happy. Our school colors of red, white and blue are offensive to anyone how? The colors of USA are offensive? I can't even begin to wrap my head around all that is happening in our great land. It saddens me that a few, loud, people are stripping us of our history. I truly wish the energy spent trying to attack our name and colors would be spent helping the homeless, finding solutions for the drug epidemic, putting a stop to human trafficking and many other real issues we are facing. I'm involved in my community. I give back every chance I get. I try to make a positive difference in the lives of others. I think most of us do. If you feel it's time to put an end this nonsense please make your voice known. Support your local schools and teams. Changing names, mascots or colors would be very costly. Our kids are still feeling the effects of not being in school or playing sports since COVID. Many kids missed prom and graduation. Many just want life to get back to normal. Can we please just be kind? Can we please stop making trouble where there is none? I'm a proud supporter of Southwestern Rebels.

Send message as generation of change

To the editor:

Both of my parents graduated from Southwestern High School as Rebels. My dad was a basketball player there in the '60s with his younger brother and many of his lifelong friends. I'm one of four siblings, and we were all Southwestern Rebels. My sister, Julie, was a state champion and state runner-up as a Lady Rebel basketball player. During that time the entire family were as passionate of Rebel fans as you could find. My mother was the school nurse at the elementary for 25 years. My wife is currently a teacher at Southwestern Elementary. I also intend on sending my children to Southwestern when they are old enough to attend. So, you'd be hard pressed to find someone with stronger ties to Southwestern school system and the Rebel mascot than me. I care about the school and have an interest in its future. So, that is why I'm sharing my opinion.

I can clearly remember strong and clear references to the Confederate army version of the term "Rebel". We have multiple yearbooks that have the Confederate flag on them. I even remember when the little Rebel soldier had his gun removed because it was too violent a message to send to kids, which was a controversial move. A part of me wants my kids to be "Rebels" like I was, but it's not the rational adult part of me that tries to imagine what it must be like to be an African-American student, outnumbered 100:1 at Southwestern, and have to deal with those oppressive connotations of being labeled a "Rebel" on top of that. No, it's the sentimental child in me that just wants my kids to experience things exactly the way that I experienced them for no good reason other than the warmth of nostalgia that I would feel.

We can argue all day about if the Rebel mascot is offensive and racist, and what it means to everyone of us individually. However, one thing we should be able to agree on at this point is that keeping the "Rebel" name and mascot is absolutely controversial and completely unnecessary. Cubs, Eagles, Tigers, Bulldogs and Hilltoppers don't have this issue because those are all universally benign and acceptable. Students of those schools can ALL rally around their teams and wear shirts with those mascot names on them proudly.

I truly hope that this school board and administration are the ones that finally have the courage to resolve this controversy and change the mascot rather than pass it onto our kids to deal with. It will absolutely be changed at some point in the future, and it will absolutely make a lot of people mad when it is. The question is: Will we be the generation, in this small Indiana town, to stand up for the idea that just because a mascot doesn't personally bother you, doesn't mean that you shouldn't consider and respect how it makes other people feel? This is one problem that we actually can solve in the middle of all of the unrest that we're witnessing across the nation right now. This change would send a strong, clear message that from this moment forward, any child is welcome at Southwestern.

Offended by judgmental opinion

Letter to the editor:

I'm a graduate of Southwestern High School Class of 1965, and have lived in Hanover all of my life and attended Hanover/Southwestern schools. I have worked in Jefferson County since I was 16 years old.

Never living elsewhere and never being educated elsewhere may be why I DO NOT consider myself to be uneducated, and even worse, racist. Going to a small rural school we never considered the name, Rebel, or the flag to be anything other than just a mascot.

I have always been proud of my education, my school and my community. I take great offense to outsiders being judgmental to something that does not concern them and they were never a part. Especially to say we are at the very least uneducated and at worst racist. Really?

Fifty-nine years ago the Class of 1961 selected the Rebel name and flag based on the movie "Rebel Without A Cause" starring Indiana native James Dean. As I said, this was a school mascot — nothing more, nothing less.

If it is changed due to majority pressure from the people that's OK, but I do think we — the people — are owed an apology.

My generation has seen wars and poverty but we were taught in school many basics: Pledge of Allegiance, the Lord's Prayer, respect for life, property and authority and loyalty to family, friends and community and much more.

Sadly, later generations have seen political unrest, burning of the American flag, destruction of structures that were a part of our American history, riots, looting with no respect for human lives, property and especially authority and the decline of the family unit.

Hopefully, the next generation can overcome and learn from the mistakes being made. Our American system is unraveling and to what end? A high school mascot named 59 years ago needs to "get on the right side of history and change their mascot?" Does this seem rather trivial with everything that is going on in our world today? Sure does to me.

Time to find more suitable name

To the editor:

As a former student at Southwestern (I graduated in 1980), I never carefully considered the "Rebels" moniker I wore on my basketball and track uniform. Or if I did think about it, I could have easily written off this nod to the Confederacy (albeit in a Northern State …) as reflecting some of the deep divisions present in southern Indiana during and in the aftermath of the Civil War. However, the time has come to give up old ways, and I urge the board of directors to change the name of school to something that will better reflect what should be our shared values and understanding of history in the modern era. The War was not about generalized "way of life" in the South, unless that way of life involved the torture, murder, forced labor, and rape of African Americans. All one has to do is read the Articles of Succession drafted by South Carolina and other traitorous states and their legislatures to understand their motivations.

In light of the death of George Floyd and numerous other black citizens, and with the nationwide recognition that "Black Lives Matter," having a sports team named the Rebels no longer seems like the quaint anachronism that I remember as a student. Rather, it feels like the hot embrace of the white nationalism that was bent, but not broken, by the Civil War, the Reconstruction, the Civil Rights Era, and the election of America's first African American president. It's time to rebel, and find a more suitable name for Southwestern High School.

Proud to be a part of caring team

Letter to the editor:

Like most teachers, I entered the education field to work with children, hoping to inspire their curiosity and help them grow. Unfortunately, this year the pandemic had other plans for teachers across the country for whom spending time with their class is the most rewarding part of their profession.

In the midst of all the disruption, I am very proud of the way that Southwestern's dedicated administrators, faculty and staff in our district collaborated to see our students and their families through to the end of the year. In my 13 years of teaching, this was a first of its kind and unexpected challenge — but our school stepped up in an incredible fashion. From delivering school lunches across our district to taking advantage of digital resources from companies like Google and Classdojo to stay closely connected with our students our educators worked incredibly hard to finish the school year on a high note.

I still miss my class, and wish we would have been able to have a "normal" end of the school year, but I am grateful we were able to do our best to stay connected during a difficult time. As we look to the fall and hope to see the smiling faces of our students once again, there's a sense of comfort knowing that because of digital tools and other innovative resources, even if we continue social distancing — we will not have to stop learning, connecting, and growing together. I am so proud to be part of our caring team!

Madison TV15 knocked off air

BY COURIER STAFF

Madison TV15, the city's public access channel, will be off the air for an unspecified amount of time due to an outage that began on Monday.

During Monday's rainstorm an unknown problem was encountered causing the cable access system — Channel 15 on Cinergy Metronet and Channel 377 on Spectrum — to lock up. Viewers who tune to those channels find the channels locked on a Windows Media Player screen.

Aaron P. Wood, station manager, said the station's equipment is OK, but a leak during the storm knocked out access to the cable systems. He did not know how long repairs will take but that all meetings and events the station normally broadcasts are being recorded and will be shown once repairs are made. In the interim, those broadcasts are available online at www.madisontv15.com.

"They are working as best they can to get everything back on-air," said Tawana Thomas, a member of the Public Video Service Board. "Your patience will be appreciated."

TRAFFIC

One of those projects is when the city takes over State Road 56 from Jefferson Street to the top of Hanover Hill on July 1 with State Road 56 and U.S. 421 joining from Jefferson Street to the roundabout at the top of the U.S. 421 hill.

The road transfer will allow the city to begin work to redesign Main Street to meet the needs of local businesses, the historic district and residential neighborhoods.

The project could involve redesigning Main Street ahead of the next round of much needed road improvements there and banning heavy truck traffic except for those delivering to downtown businesses. That in itself could calm some of downtown Madison's traffic issues but it also would most likely send more heavy traffic onto Clifty Drive so the key is finding the balance that the city can live with in both areas.

The other project is a plan to evaluate all streets, stop signs, speed zones and crosswalks throughout the city in an effort to determine what changes are needed to make them safer and more efficient. The last such comprehensive evaluation of the city's roads was decades ago, so the impact of that project could be far and wide.

"There will be chances for a lot of public input on these — we'll appoint a steering committee — with the overall design broken down into three parts," Courtney said of the Main Street project. He said just to pave State Road 56 —which will become Main Street — from Jefferson Street to the hilltop will cost upwards of $5 million and have to be tackled through a combination of local money and federal and state grants so the only way to attack the project is to break it down into smaller projects. Considering the makeup of Main Street and its tenants, those segments could include commercial, mixed use and residential.

"It's going to be a long-term project,"Courtney said.

As far as the immediate needs of residents hoping for relief from speeders in their neighborhoods, Wallace said he favored speed bumps over more stop signs because stop signs can be ignored but speed bumps are a physical deterrent that speeders immediately recognize and slow down. He also said stop signs and control devices can become points of increase in traffic accidents when a motorist runs the sign or device and hits another motorist.

"Speed bumps are a physical barrier that you feel and they make a big difference," Wallace said. "You hit that bump and you automatically slow down."

Courtney noted that speeding is a traffic offense punishable by fines and the city could patrol more and increase fines if it takes that to get the point across — especially in problem areas.

In Loving Memory Of

Lucas Cade Webster

Lucas Cade Webster, age 20, of Carrollton, Kentucky, passed away on Friday, June 19, 2020 at the Carroll County Memorial Hospital in Carrollton. He was born on February 26, 2000 in LaGrange, Kentucky, the son of Autumn Oneal and Jack Webster.

Lucas was a 2019 graduate of Trimble County High School, and currently a student at Jefferson Community and Technical College in Carrollton. He was a member of North Madison Christian Church in Madison, Indiana.

Lucas loved his music. He was an old soul and loved the older songs. Hunting and fishing was always a love for him but as the years passed, he was not able to hunt, but could still fish. He loved going to Florida with his dad fishing, and Todd (his stepdad) taught him so much about wildlife, hunting, fishing and how to survive in nature, if ever needed.

Lucas and his mommy had a bond that was threaded in gold by God himself. They did everything together. When he could no longer walk, she carried him. She said her strength has always started with him. They went on many adventures, including Disney World, Paradise Island, Disney cruises, and the ocean many times. He loved many places and he loved his mommy.

Lucas and his brother had a bond that was like no other. He was by his side from the minute he was born. Lucas was so proud of him. Lucas will always protect him.

Jacob was his concert buddy. There is a Rolling Stone concert coming up next month that they had planned to attend. Now, Jacob, Ben and Dane will carry that on for Lucas. He will watch over them for sure.

Lucas loved Jesus. He would tell his mamaw over and over that he wished Jesus would hurry and come. He had the Bible on his phone and would sit and listen to it being read to him. Lucas told his mamaw the night he went to Heaven to take his hand and pray with him. He somehow knew the Lord was calling him. The last words he said to his mamaw was "Please, Mamaw, I just want to go to sleep." God said, "Come on, Lucas, let's go home."

There will never be anyone like Lucas. He loved everyone and oh, how he loved Jesus. He just completed his first year of college with all A's. His dream was to be a psychologist someday. He said he wanted to help people that were sad and needed their life to get better.

Lucas was born a comedian. Some of the things he would come up with would put you on the floor laughing.

Last, but not least, his disease of Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy was the biggest fight of his life. He was the strongest person and dealt with that terrible disease with all the strength he had. He was getting much worse over the last six months. It was hard to keep his body steady, and he could not lift his arms even to scratch his nose. He was such a man and God knew he could not handle what was coming, so he said "Lucas, come on home." I am so thankful that he gave his life to Jesus Christ two years ago.

Papaw Martin could solve al things as far as Lucas was concerned. They had so many wonderful times together. When Lucas was still walking, Papaw would take him golfing. He had his own set of clubs. The two went on a deep-sea fishing adventure in Florida. What an experience that was! Oh, how he loved his papaw.

Now, lets get down to Mama. He loved and trusted her with his life. He knew that she could take care of all his very special needs better than anyone. Mamaw devoted her life to her Lucas and there was nothing he needed or wanted that he did not have, and that was the excellent care she gave him. That special love between the two will never be matched.

Never forget this beautiful boy. Always know how much he loved all of you. And live to be with him someday in Heaven.

Lucas is survived by his mother Autumn Oneal (Brian); father, Jack Webster (Stephanie); step-father, Todd Oneal; brother, Colton Oneal; brother by another mother, Ben Stevens; maternal grandparents, Dr. Cecil and Judy Martin; paternal grandparents, Jack and Janice Webster; step grandparents, Gary and Sue Oneal; great grandmother, Norma Simmons; aunts: Nicole Lacefield (Craig), Lori Clifford (Troy), Kathy Andrew (Rick), Tina Buchanan (Steve), Lisa Louden (Darrell), and Amy Martin; uncles: Scott Taylor (Jana), Kurt Martin (Dianne) Keith Martin (Tracy), Kent Martin and Breck Taylor; his cousins that he loved so very much, Jacob and Lane Herald, Ethan Plew (Meaghan), Zach Clifford, Dane Lacefield, Mitchell Lacefield, Eden Oberhausen (CJ), Aubree and Aleeah, Leighton Taylor (Paige), Laken Taylor, Courtney Martin, Zach Martin, Chase Martin, Alisa and Nick Taylor, Jaclyn Crosby (Phillip), Jennifer Pyles, Courtney Buchanan, Elly Buchanan, Krista Taylor, David Taylor (Jessica), Ashley Stark (Scotty and Collin), Heather Bradley (Justin), Jordyn, Bodie, Lyla and Arleigh Herald.

VISITATION AND SERVICES WERE HELD AT CHURCH

Brye Welty and Bob Hicks conducted funeral services at 1:00 PM Thursday, June 25, 2020 at North Madison Christian Church, Madison. Interment followed in Bedford Cemetery, Bedford, KY.

The family requests memorial contributions be made to Parent Project Muscular Dystrophy.

Warrant leads to drug arrest

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison Police Department officers seized methamphetamine, syringes, drug paraphernalia and U.S. currency wile serving a search warrant that resulted in the arrest of a Madison woman on Monday.

Katherine J. Lunsford 35, Madison, was arrested for possession of methamphetamine, maintaining a common nuisance, possession of a syringe and possession of paraphernalia as a result of a search warrant served on her Lincoln Street residence, said a department news release.

The search warrant was obtained as the result of an ongoing narcotic investigation led by MPD Sr. Patrolman Aaron Watson.

Watson was assisted by MPD Chief John Wallace Sr. Patrolman Kyle Cutshaw, Sgt. Ricky Harris and Patrolmen Trent Smith, Zackery Nicholson and Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputy Kevin Fry.

Deputies responding to welfare check find stolen handgun

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Jefferson County Sheriff's Office deputies responding to a welfare check call charged a man after recovering a handgun that had been reported stolen in Hendricks County about two years earlier.

According to Chief Deputy Josh Taylor, officers arrived at a residence on Longsway Drive, in the area of Madison Municipal Airport at around 1:45 a.m. Tuesday to find Clayton Hamby, two other males and a female at the residence. Taylor said none of the subjects could provide much information on what transpired to lead a neighbor to request the welfare check, but officers were able to determine the female was "too scared to leave until police arrived" due of Hamby's behavior and the fact that he was in possession of a firearm.

When officers ran the serial numbers on the handgun in Hamby's possession, they found it had been reported stolen in Plainfield, Indiana, two years prior, Taylor said.

Hamby, 19, of Madison, was arrested on charges of criminal confinement, possession of a stolen firearm and intimidation.

"I think there's more circumstances they haven't shared with us, really, surrounding it all," Taylor said.

Hamby was taken to Jefferson County Jail and awaits arraignment in Jefferson County Circuit Court on Thursday.

That means those who paid the usual single fee to get in morning or afternoon and swim all day, have to buy another day pass to get back in for the afternoon.

While that's more costly for returning swimmers, the outcome has been mostly positive for the park — especially when weather doesn't cooperate, Snodgrass said.

"I think the two sessions are really helping, because most kids don't want to spend all day here; four hours is enough. Yesterday morning it was cloudy and rainy, and it allowed us to open up for our second session since the sun came out, so it gives us the option. Typically we would have closed for the full day," she said Wednesday.

Snodgrass said the park is averaging about 175 people a day over the first two weeks and they've reached full 250 capacity a few of those days, and had to turn some visitors away.

In addition to the 30-minute shutdown, managers and lifeguards are spraying down slides, wiping handles and practicing other sanitation techniques before opening, after water aerobics and during another 1 p.m. break, she said.

Pink Xs for social distancing were also placed at the entrance on Vaughn Drive and visitors can no longer exit through that entrace. Instead, they now have to exit through the side entrance onto Broadway and Elm Street. Showers are also off limits until state restrictions are relaxed further, and visitors cannot change in the locker rooms, Snodgrass said.

Another policy change this year involves season passes and rentals. The City of Madison Parks Department will not sell season passes or rent the pool to parties, but those who bought passes before the pandemic will still be able to use them. However, visitors may still buy $30 summer passes for water aerobics, which Snodgrass said has brought a lot of visitors to the park.

"We had 40 ladies in the pool this morning for that," Snodgrass noted Wednesday.

Swim lessons for kids are also off the table for now. Snodgrass said that may change when Indiana enters Phase 5, but management was unsure due to the time it takes to get sessions ready.

"Maybe when things lift, I'm not really sure. If they lift, we might be able to add it, but it does take a lot of time to get that set up," she said.

Unlike most aspects of running a public pool, staffing has not been affected by the pandemic with many other pools remaining closed. Snodgrass said she's been able to keep 20 guards, two assistant managers, and a few additional employees who divide time between the snack bar and front desk like she would any summer.

Only time will tell what procedures change when Indiana enters Phase 5 on July 4.

music. I was only 22 years old when I joined Frank and Debbie Pearson in a band called The Brass Tacks. Remember, the mid '70s was the disco era, and we were big into it, costumes and everything!

"The band included Frank and Debbie, of course, plus Timmy Adkins on keys, Bobby Owings on guitar and Ronnie Albertson on drums. We played four or five nights a week at the Hillside Inn here in Madison, plus we played the old "Holiday Inn Circuit" all around the region.

"When disco faded away I joined The Daniel Band. We were into the urban cowboy scene that was so popular. Joe Perkinson was in that band with me, from like '79 to '81. Joe and I go way back. I can't even remember all the different bands we've been in together.

"It's the same with me and Dennis O'Neal. We played in so many bands over the years I've lost count.

"I played with the No Name Band in the '80s and Centerline Band. I played with Harold Kinman and The Madisonian's. Oh, and Patty and The Twilighters. I'm leaving out a bunch I know. My earliest band was called The Dimensions, back in junior high. John Canida was on keys, me on guitar, Don Ely on drums, and my cousin Jimmy Crafton played too.

"Probably most people are going to remember me playing with Young Country for many years, from 1993 until 2000 or so. We played the Electric Lady a lot in those days. Young Country opened for a lot of big name country acts that came through the area. It was a good run and I'll always remember and cherish the time.

"These days I'm not in any full time bands, but I get calls to play fairly often. Joe Perkinson asked me to play with Ethan Turner at the big July 4th country fest that's happening downtown. Plus I'm a member of the Hanover United Methodist Church and I play in the praise band on Sunday mornings. I'm staying plenty busy, and it fits my retired lifestyle."

CLIFTY CENTENNIAL

100 years of preserving nature, beauty at Clifty Falls State Park

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

If John Brough had had his way, the area now known as Clifty Falls State Park would have been the setting for one of the most beautiful railroad lines in the state. But Brough's grand plans fell through almost before they began when his Madison & Indianapolis Railroad ran out of money.

Nearly 170 years later, Clifty Falls State Park is one of the top nature tourism destinations in the state, a thriving recreation area that plays host to more than half a million visitors each year and features some of the most impressive sights in this part of country.

"It's one of the most beautiful, if not the most beautiful parks I have ever been in. And I've been in a lot of them," said local photographer Bernie Kasper. "From the wildflowers to the falls to the canyon, it's just unbelievable and it's right in our own backyard."

Clifty Falls State Park is celebrating its 100th anniversary on Saturday with a full day of activities at the park. While the initial celebration had to be tamped down due to the COVID-19 pandemic, visitors will still get a chance to visit the park, learn about its history and get an in-depth tour from those who know the park best.

Locals had known about the beauty and diversity of the area long before it became a park. Four main waterfalls — all at least 60 feet in height — drain into a deep canyon in which sunlight only reaches at midday. The result of glacial drainage and erosion, the park began to take shape just after the last ice age.

While Clifty Canyon may have been deep — more than 300 feet deep in some places — Brough saw a chance to use the canyon walls to build a better railroad.

The Madison & Indianapolis Railroad had cut a track from the Ohio River to the hilltop in the 1830s and that line had allowed the city of Madison to grow into the largest city in the state. But the 5.89% incline, rising 412 feet in elevation slowed down transport and the railroad was beginning to lose money to lines out of Louisville and Cincinnati.

Brough, then president of the Madison & Indianapolis, saw Clifty Canyon as the perfect alternative for more shallow grade. Work began in 1852 with the construction of two tunnels and several trestles throughout the area. But before a single track could be laid, the railroad went bankrupt and "Brough's Folly" was left unfinished.

Seventy years later, the citizens of Madison and Jefferson County donated the land to the state of Indiana for the express purpose of building a state park. In 1920, Clifty Falls State Park officially became the third of its kind in the state.

The park has grown considerably over the years. Originally just 570 acres surrounding the canyon, the park expanded to more than 1,500 acres in 1965 with the addition of the "old field" section on the eastern portion of the park. The Clifty Inn has evolved from a converted farmhouse on neighboring Thomas Hill to a state-of-the-art lodge with an indoor pool and conference rooms. Plans for a lake fell through in the 1960s, but an Olympic-sized outdoor pool was added in the 1970s.

Crews from the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Works Progress Administration spent six years laboring in the park during the Great Depression, building the current roads and many of the buildings. First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt paid a visit to the park in 1934 to inspect the CCC camp and spent the night in the Clifty Inn.

Throughout all the developments and improvements, Clifty Falls has retained its rustic natural charm and continues to be a huge draw, as evidenced by the huge overflow crowds that poured into the park earlier this month when COVID-19 quarantines were lifted in the state. The park was so busy on several days that all parking areas were full and no additional vehicles were allowed in until others had left.

Big Clifty Falls — the park's namesake — along with Little Clifty Falls, are the smallest falls in the park in terms of height at 60 feet. But Big Clifty makes up for that with a volume of water that keeps it flowing virtually all year long. Hoffman Falls stands at 78 feet in height and Tunnel Falls is the tallest in the park at 83 feet. There are several other impressive falls in the park, including Wallace Falls, which is on the western edge of the canyon, just opposite Tunnel Falls.

But it's not just waterfalls that make the park so popular with visitors. More than 60 species of birds call the park home and there are 10 hiking trails covering a combined 14 miles that allow visitors to see many of those species up close, as well as the massive trees and diversity of plants and other animals.

The largest of Brough's railroad tunnels is now a man-made cave which has become home to a large bat population.

Those sights and sounds can soothe the soul, and it is why so many people venture into the park on a daily basis.

"You go down into that gorge, especially on a weekday, and you're just alone. You can sit in solitude on a rock and just contemplate life" said Kasper, who said he goes to the park three to four times weekly. "I walk up and down those hillsides and you just feel at peace. It's really my home away from home."

Kasper also began taking his then 10-year-old son on hikes with him to Clifty Falls and the activity turned into hobby. Today, Bernie and his son Isaiah — now a student at Purdue University — travel all over the eastern part of the country, hiking on trails and taking photos of wildflowers and butterflies which often find their way into magazines and calendars.

"He is my best friend," Kasper said of his son, "and it's Clifty Falls that brought us together."

Clifty Falls offers a diverse ecosystem

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Clifty Falls State Park is more than just a collection of waterfalls and a deep gorge, it is also a diverse ecosystem with numerous birds, mammals, reptiles, wildflowers and trees throughout the 1500-plus acres of land.

BIRDS

More than 60 species of birds have been spotted in the park with the usual robins, sparrows, cardinals, turkey vultures and black vultures the most prevalent. But look closer and you can find wild turkeys, woodpeckers, hummingbirds, barn owls, chickadees, titmice, nuthatches, wrens, blue jays and golden finches. Peregrine falcons and Cooper's hawks can also be spotted as well as the occasional bald eagle thanks to the park's proximity to the Ohio River.

MAMMALS

Deer, raccoon, squirrel and rabbit make up the majority of mammals in the park, but skunks, groundhogs and opossums can also be found in large numbers. Several larger predators have also been spotted including bobcats and coyotes. If you're lucky, you can even spot a river otter in the numerous creeks.

REPTILES & AMPHIBIANS

Not surprisingly, snakes are common in the park from the harmless black rat snake and garter snakes to the venomous copperhead and diamondback. But the Eastern box turtle can also be spotted moving along the trails along with toads and tree frogs. The numerous creeks are home to frogs, salamanders and yellow-bellied sliders, among others.

TREES

Arguably the most noticeable feature of the park are its trees, and the park features more than 100 different varieties. Maple trees (black, red, silver and sugar) are everywhere, but they share space with cedar, white pine, ash, hickory, birch, sycamore, walnut, cherry, chestnut, cottonwood, elm, locust, oak, and of course, the state tree of Indiana, the tulip poplar. An old orchard just west of the Clifty Park swimming pool also provides grapevines and apple trees.

WILDFLOWERS

Invasive species such as garlic mustard have pushed out several of the wildflowers, but there are still plenty to enjoy including Virgina bluebells, stiff goldenrods, black-eyed Susans, ox-eyes, royal catchfly and Indiangrass. A field of milkwood planted near the pool serves as a butterfly habitat and is one of the largest in the state.

CLIFTY FALLS STATE PARK TIMELINE

1852 — The Madison Indianapolis Railroad attempts to build a line through Clifty Canyon. The project goes bankrupt before a single track is laid. The project is known as Brough's Folly, after railroad president John Brough.

1920 — On Oct. 27, the citizens of Jefferson County donate the original 570 acres to the state of Indiana at the suggestion of Richard Lieber for the creation of a state park.

1921 — The first Clifty Inn opens on nearby Thomas Hill. A converted farmhouse, the Inn only has six rooms, a dining room and a lobby. The renovation of a nearby barn the following year adds an additional 16 rooms.

1924 — On Aug. 25, a new 32-room Clifty Inn is dedicated on a bluff, overlooking the Ohio River and the city of Madison. Local residents raised $35,000 for the construction of the building.

1928 — A arched stone memorial is erected at an overlook in honor of James W. Lilly, a member of the state hospital board who was instrumental in securing the land for the park.

1933 — Workers from the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Works Progress Administration arrive at the park to begin improvements. The CCC and WPA are responsible for many of the roads, bridges and oldest buildings in the park, including the shelter houses, the gate houses and the current Nature Center.

1934 — On July 7, First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt pays a visit to the park to inspect the CCC and WPA projects. She stays the night in the Clifty Inn.

1936 — On May 13, the south gate is officially dedicated as the W.A. Guthrie Memorial Entrance. A former state senator, Guthrie served as the state's first State Conservation Department Chairman and oversaw the creation of Clifty Falls State Park.

1948 — On May 5, a new concrete arch bridge is dedicated. The bridge replaces a wooden trestle bridge built by the CCC in 1937.

1965 — The park more than doubles in size with the acquisition of the "old field" from the adjoining Madison State Hospital site. The new land increases the size of the park to 1,519 acres and allows for the addition of a new campground and swimming pool in future years. Plans for a 27-acre lake off Hoffman Branch are scrapped.

1966 — The Clifty Inn grows with the addition of a 36-room motel. It is officially renamed the Clifty Inn & Motor Lodge.

1974 — On April 3, a tornado rips through the area and destroys much of the southern portion of the park, including the Clifty Inn, the saddle barn, horse trails and riding ring. The Inn is rebuilt the following year, but horse riding is permanently discontinued.

1975 — In July, a new outdoor Olympic-sized swimming pool, along with a bath house and concession stand, opens to the public.

1975 — A new campground complete with 107 modern campsites and 60 primitive sites opens in the new portion of the park.

1980 — In April, the Clifty Canyon Nature Preserve is established. The preserve includes all land west of the main park road and provides protection for the plants and animals in the area.

1981 — On Oct. 29, Indiana Gov. Robert Orr is on hand to dedicate the newly-remodeled saddle barn, which was converted into a nature center.

1999 — The Clifty Inn gets a $2.4 million renovation which adds an indoor pool. The outdoor pool gets two new water slides.

2006 — The Clifty Inn completes an $8.8 million renovation increasing its capacity to 163 rooms and also adds conference rooms.

Hiding a new baby from family

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: Two and a half years ago, while my business was doing well, my marriage of 30+ years wasn't.

It was that same old case of drifting apart due to the pressures of life. Our kids had left home except for one, and we looked at downsizing. We signed up for a new apartment, so we had to get our house ready for sale.

My wife and I had this almighty fight — we'd had these before — and our relationship was becoming toxic for me, so when we had this fight I finally called it a day. We did counseling but instead of getting us back together, it was suggested we separate, much to my now ex's disgust.

I wanted out, and she didn't. But it was either stay with her and harm myself or leave.

I had to stay at the house as I was renovating it, which made it difficult. A few months later, I'd met my now-partner, who is much younger than me. We fell for each other pretty quickly during that period in which I was still at the house but my wife and I were over. A few months later, my now-partner became pregnant.

No one knew about my new relationship. In November, my wife and I told the kids we were separating, and, naturally, they were upset. I moved in with my partner to look after her while she was pregnant but still kept her and the pregnancy a secret.

After Christmas this year, I told my ex and my kids about my partner, but not the fact that she was pregnant. My ex didn't take it well at all. My eldest daughter and youngest son took it pretty well, but my middle daughter took it the hardest. Based on her reaction, I was afraid to tell them anything else and, as such, my new daughter is a secret.

I have agonized for all this time over telling them, and know I need to let them know very soon.

My daughter turned 1 the other day, and it was sad because her half siblings missed out.

My ex had been to a clairvoyant who told her that she saw a newborn, and the day after my ex asked me, "Is this girl pregnant?" I was stunned. I just said no. My son brought up the clairvoyant thing to me, and I laughed it off. I said: "It's more than likely in the cards sometime soon, though. Would you have a problem with having a younger sibling?" He said he'd like to be an older brother.

Part of the reason why I haven't said anything is because I care for my ex and know she will take it very hard. She has a lot of animosity toward me, as does my middle daughter.

I think I'll need to tell them one by one, with my ex finding out last. — Fearful Father

Dear Fearful: It's time to rip the Band-Aid off so that the real healing can begin. Your plan — to tell each of your children and then your ex-wife, individually, about your new daughter — is a good one. Be sure to execute it swiftly, all on the same day, as word will travel fast. Give them the space to process and be angry. Your lies have deprived your older children from the joy of a new sister and from having an honest relationship with their father. Their first reactions won't be their final reactions. Your ex-wife will have an especially hard time with the news, no doubt, and things may always be tense between you two. But that might have been the case even if it weren't for the baby.

Anger can be easier than grief

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am shattered and torn apart. My son, who served eight and half years in prison for drugs, was released last Thanksgiving. Within four days of release, "Ray" had a job as a cook, had joined a gym and was working out every day. His life was all positive.

Then the pandemic came. The restaurant closed, and the gym shut down. Ray turned back to drugs. Five months after his release, he is deceased. He overdosed.

He had been living with his twin brother, "Tom." Apparently, the restaurant manager called Tom and told him that Ray was doing drugs. Tom confronted Ray to no avail. My problem is I hold my son, Tom, responsible for Ray's death. Why? He never once called me, when I live 25 minutes away and would have been there in a heartbeat. It dawned on me days later — why did my son never call me about the drug use his brother had returned to? Tom was fearful I would have Ray put back in jail and then prison. But after all he had been through in his life, I would have never ever done that. I would have taken Ray home with me to clean up. I would have put him in a program that I went to with him. I would have had a sponsor for him. But I never ever had the chance to help my son. How do I overcome this anger, this blame and this outrage at Tom for simply allowing my other son to turn back to drugs? — R.

Dear R: I am so incredibly sorry that your son, Ray, died. No parent should have to outlive a child. I wish I could say something to make it better. But the truth is, there is some pain too deep for words to reach.

Your rage is understandable. You might find yourself preoccupied with anger toward Tom, because in a way it's more manageable than focusing on the fact that Ray is gone. But it's very possible that Ray would still be gone right now even if Tom had alerted you to what was going on. And as you seem to recognize based on your letter, you cannot let your anger toward Tom consume you, robbing you of that relationship, too.

Unfortunately, this is not something that can be worked through in this meager space. You must reach out to a counselor, grief support groups and support groups for families who have been impacted by addiction. No one can endure this alone. Some resources for your consideration: Nar-Anon (https://www.nar-anon.org), Families Anonymous (https://www.familiesanonymous.org/) LifeRing Secular Recovery (https://www.lifering.org/), and Refuge in Grief (https://refugeingrief.com).

PETS OF THE WEEK

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Rory is a handsome 2-year-old male who loves attention and is looking for a furever home so if you are looking for a handsome young cat to love on all day I AM YOUR GUY.

The kittens include a variety of cute males and females ready to find their furever homes. They love to play and are very adventurous so anyone interested in making one of these fur babies part of their family should call the animal shelter and set up an appointment to come see them.

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter has pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption for viewing at www.sisaveapet.com

In light of COVID-19, the Jefferson County Animal Shelter will only take appointments and will not accept walk-in customers. To request an appointment, email animal.shelter39@jeffersoncounty.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "WoofTrax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Submitted photos

Some of the kittens available for adoption are pictured.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call 812-265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call 812-265-2648.

Lions And Tigers And Fees Oh My!

By Stephen Dybwad
Investment Advisor

There are advisors today who make a big deal about the fees the "other guys" charge. Apparently, they want you to believe that they don't get paid to help you or at least not as much. Do you think that's true? Discussions about fees can get confusing because there are a lot of different kinds of fees. Let's talk about fees, and then I'll give you a great question to ask when it comes to determining if the fee you pay is a good thing, or not. First, let's be very clear. No matter what investment vehicle you choose, the company that issued it and the advisor that sold it to you, are going to make money. That's a good thing. If they can't make money, then they can't help you. The problem with fees is when advisors use the existence of fees to mislead you about the value of other financial vehicles you may be considering. The common question most advisors want you to ask is: How much are the fees? That's not a very good question, because it provides no context for the answer. The better question is: What do I get for the fee? A good follow-up question is: Do the fees come out of my pocket? Let's apply those questions to common investment options.

1. Mutual Funds–In a brokerage account set up by your advisor, the average fee (front-end load) is usually around 4.5% to 5.5% of every dollar you invest. For the fee, you get access to your account information, and the service and advice provided by your advisor. The fees do come out of your investment, so about 95% of your money goes to work for you on day one. In addition, there are annual fund expenses, usually around 1%. This fee pays for the printing of materials for fund holders, advertising costs, and various administrative fees. These fees also come out of your investments. If you change from one fund to another, you pay the initial fees again.
2. Mutual Funds–In a managed account set up by your advisor, all the fees associated with the brokerage account are waived. In their place is a management fee, usually around 1% of the account value annually and billed quarterly. The idea here is, the advisor has a vested interest in making your account grow, because the more you make –the more they make. Of course, if the account value goes down, the advisor still gets paid. For the fee, you get your advisor's on-going advice, and the ability to move from one fund to another without a new charge. The fee comes out of your investments (usually ¼ of 1%, four times a year –every single year).
3. 401(k) and 403(b) Plans–Fees can vary widely on these plans, but research shows that participants can pay up to 3% in fees on their company-sponsored retirement plans. For the fees, you get access to the plan representative, and any information you need regarding the plan. The fees do come out of your investments every year.
4. Variable Annuities –These contracts usually have two or three different kinds of fees. First, the Mortality and Expense (M&E) charge. This fee is usually 1.25% to 1.5% annually. For this fee, since your principal is not guaranteed, you get a guarantee that even if market losses cause your account value to drop, your death benefit will still be equal to your original investment. Second, (optional) the Guaranteed Income fee. This fee is usually 1% to 1.2% annually. If you choose this option, you are guaranteed that even if market losses cause your account value to be lost entirely, you will still receive a guaranteed income every month (or quarter, or year), until you die. Third, the sub-account fees. Each investment option in a variable annuity has a fee, and they can range from less than a half percent to around 1% annually. All of these fees can easily add up to around 3%, and are deducted from your account value annually. Variable annuities may also have a surrender period, which will be explained next...
5. Fixed Indexed Annuities (FIA)–These investments typically have no fees whatsoever, so 100% of your money goes to work for you from day one. In place of fees, these annuities use a surrender period. The length of the surrender period can vary greatly and can be matched to the client's needs. Since no fees were deducted, and since the advisor was paid from company funds and not from your investment, the company wants assurances you will stay invested long enough to allow the company to recoup its expenses and make a profit. For no fee, you get a guarantee of principle, the opportunity to participate in market gains, the guarantee to avoid all market losses, and limited penalty-free access to your money during the surrender period.
6. Fixed Indexed Annuities w/ Income Benefits–These investments operate the same as above but provide an optional benefit. The Guaranteed Income benefits assure that if your guaranteed income depletes your account value, your guaranteed income will continue until your death. The fee for this feature is usually around 1% annually and is deducted from your account. (As with all annuities, the advisor's compensation is paid directly to the advisor from the annuity company's operating account. None of the advisor's compensation is deducted from your money).

There are a lot of other types of investments we could discuss, but these represent the bulk of what is being used in the marketplace today. Here are some observations:

1. When it's all said and done, the advisor ends up being paid about the same regardless of the investment vehicle used.
2. Some investments offer tangible benefits, like guarantees, for their fees, while others offer esoteric benefits, like advice, for their fees.
3. Fees are not the primary reason for choosing an investment.
4. Beware of the advisor who emphasizes fees over your goals and needs.
5. Ask, what is important to me? What do I want in return for the fees I pay?

I will be back with more good questions for you.
